Re: Genetically engineered food products FDA Docket No. 00P-1211/CPI

Dear Commissioner Henney,

I am concerned by the proliferation of genetically engineered food products.

While these products are touted as being safe by the corporations that manufacture them and by the scientists hired by these same corporations, I have no faith in the claims of either.

There has been not nearly enough study as to the current safety nor long term effects that these foods may have on the food chain or the environment. It appears that some of these genetically engineered crops already have an adverse effect on the environment.

I have yet to see adequate precaution keeping these monster foods out of the human food chain. Case in point the recent recall of GE corn which "mistakenly" was added to food products.

I understand that many of these GE crops are designated for non-human consumption overseas. Given human and particularly the current state of corporate greed, do you honestly expect these foods not to be used for human consumption or processed overseas and sold back here for human consumption?

I strongly urge you to raise awareness over these potentially dangerous even deadly products before you leave office. These foods should be banned not only for human but also animal consumption here and overseas.

Thank you again for your support.
